MADAME PETROVA
IN GREAT PLAY
AT LYRIC TODAY

Mme. Petrova, the foremost emotional star of the stage or screen, will be seen at the Lyric theatre today only in "The Eternal Question," a five-part Metro Wonderplay produced by the Popular Plays and Players. This is, without doubt, the strongest feature in which the great Petrova has ever appeared, and to miss it is to miss one of the sensations of the year. The production abounds with big scenes, including a realistic chapter made at sea, when the boat goes down in the ocean and overcomes a steamer going under full steam. The heroine, played by Mme. Petrova, has been induced and taken aboard the vessel, and her rescue is one of the most thrilling affairs ever shown in motion pictures.

In "The Eternal Question," Mme. Petrova is surrounded by an unusually strong supporting cast which includes Arthur Hoops, Marion Hamilton, Edward Martindel, Warren Oland, Evelyn Leone, Howard Messinger and Evelyn Dunn. The story is an original one written by Aaron Hoffman, was directed by Burton King, and the production was supervised by Harry Gerber, a master of intricate plots and novelties in motion picture.

For the first time since she has appeared in America, on either the speaking stage or screen, Mme. Petrova essayed a character role that of an immigrant girl. She is seen in this role during the early chapters of the story, and afterwards gets into strong, emotional situations and scenes in which she excels. In this production Mme. Petrova wears half a dozen gowns that are extremely costly creations, and added to other clothes worn by the star, constitute the most expensive wardrobe of any actress now appearing before the camera.

JUNE CAPRICE IN A BEAUTIFUL PLAY
NOW AT THE PASTIME

In her newest picture for William Fox, "Little Miss Happiness," famous June Caprice plays the part of an innocent country girl, Lucy White. She lives with her grandmother, Sarah Alexander, and earns a living for them both by selling yeast.
